§ 7 Expulsion, Cancellation, Suspension, Effects of the Suspension of Membership

The exchange operating company may also expel an exchange member even if it has not been established beyond doubt that the requirements are met. Orders entered for the exchange member shall be deleted. The exchange member shall be responsible for furnishing proof thereof. The proof that all liabilities vis-à-vis the exchange operating company, EXAA and CCP.A as the Clearing House and third parties acting on their behalf have been met and all orders have been deleted shall be attached to the application or shall be submitted afterwards.

(4) In the case of a suspension of membership for the purpose of examining if the criteria for expulsion are met (§ 34 para 2 Stock Exchange Act), the exchange operating company may request the exchange member to provide the information needed to clarify the matter and to present the relevant documents and may also set a deadline. The exchange operating company shall have the right to obtain information from third parties after having informed the exchange member thereof.

(5) For the duration of the suspension of membership, the exchange member and its exchange traders shall be excluded from trading, and access to the trading system shall be interrupted and orders shall be deleted. New orders will not be permitted to be entered by the exchange member and its exchange traders. To enforce the obligations of the exchange member during suspended membership, the exchange operating company may at any time define a deadline. If the deadline is not met, the exchange operating company may take the required measures instead of the exchange member.

(6) Should membership of a general clearing member end, non-clearing members assigned to this general clearing member shall no longer be permitted to take part in trading.
